Fundraising

Working with the University of Wyoming Foundation, I have cultivated a network of donors for the Wyoming Institute for Humanities Research. Since becoming institute director, the institute has received multiple major gifts (over $25,000) and many smaller donations. These donations have come from individuals, family foundations, and philanthropic foundations.

PUBLIC TALKS, PERFORMANCES, AND PRESENTATIONS

UNIVERSITY AND COMMUNITY SERVICE

As director of the Wyoming Institute for Humanities Research, I am responsible for the institute's entire operations, working with a steering committee of elected faculty, and managing the institute's staff. I direct the institute's programs and funding opportunities, public engagement, external grant writing, and philanthropic gift development. I facilitate the weekly meetings for the institute's centerpiece program for faculty research production, the Humanities Research Group, in which approximately eight UW faculty are accepted to participate in a yearlong workshop to advance their projects in progress. I am the lead/PI for the institute's projects and grant writing, including the Democracy Laboratory. I am the lead facilitator for the Democracy Lab's meetings. The Democracy Laboratory seeks to empower students, faculty, and the public using interdisciplinary methods drawn from diverse disciplines, such as anthropology, art, cultural studies, geography, history, literature, philosophy, and political science in order to connect our communities and to strengthen the quality of our democracy. The Democracy Lab is a dynamic, interdisciplinary, intergenerational space devoted to one of the most difficult problems we face: how to make liberty and justice for all a fact of life rather than a distant dream.

The humanities institute offers a range of funding and support to faculty, students, and the public, including research and subvention funding, funding for Working Groups, and student awards. The institute organizes annually the Sandeen Lecture in the Humanities, which is the marquee public event for showcasing faculty research in the humanities, as well as other invited talks from prominent speakers, and also the institute's informal series of faculty "Think & Drink" conversations. I serve as an ex officio member of the Wyoming Humanities Council, the state affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities. I am the institute's liaison to the National Humanities Alliance and the Consortium of Humanities Centers and Institutes.

SERVICE TO THE PROFESSION

Advisor to the family of Dr. Sue Eakin, the historian who performed much of the work to recover Solomon Northup's narrative, Twelve Years a Slave, from obscurity. Currently I am helping to distribute Dr. Eakin's materials to research centers, libraries, and museums. I have thus far placed material at the International Slavery Museum, Liverpool, England; the Gilder Lehrman Center, Yale University; the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center in Cincinnati, Ohio; and the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture at the New York Public Library.

Editorial Committee Member, University of Wyoming Press (2019-present)

Editorial Collective member, Journal of Working Class Studies (2016-present)

Peer reviewer for the University of Alabama Press, the University Press of Mississippi, and the Rocky Mountain Review.

Peer Reviewer for the National Endowment for the Humanities (Public Programs)

Tenure and Promotion Reviewer for faculty at Michigan State University, Texas State University

Editorial Board member, Journal for the Study of Radicalism, Michigan State University Press.
(2009-present)

Editor, Quarter After Eight magazine, Athens, Ohio. Read and evaluated manuscripts for publication; wrote grants for the organization. (1999-2000)

Research Assistant, Office of Research and Sponsored Programs, Western Michigan University.
Served the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Education, Fine Arts, and Health and Human Services in the search for federal, state and local government funding to promote education and social services research and technical assistance; proofread grants. (1997-1998)
