To the Joint Labor, Health and Social Services Interim Committee

Program Overview

The Fay W. Whitney School of Nursing offers a graduate program that prepares Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioners (PMHNP). PMHNPs are advanced practice registered nurses who provide a full range of psychiatric care, including assessing, diagnosing, and managing the prevention and treatment of psychiatric disorders and mental health problems. PMHNPs work in various settings, from outpatient settings such as clinics to hospitals.

A master's program, started in the fall of 2005, began with funding assistance from the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA). Student enrollment began in the 2005-2006 academic year.

The State of Wyoming established an educational loan repayment program for PMHNP students in 2006. Under this program, the University of Wyoming is authorized to provide up to $10,000 per academic semester or $2,500 per summer session for nurses enrolled in a PMHNP program full-time. Students enrolled part-time can receive funds proportionally reduced based on the number of credit hours the student is taking.

The PMHNP loan program was organized to support six students annually for two years of education. Students receiving support from the State are obligated to actively engage in professional practice as a PMHNP for up to one year for each academic year of study for which support was provided under this program, or repay all amounts expended by the State for the student's education.

Required Reports

W.S. 21-17-116 (e) – Under this provision, like the WWAMI program, the University's Board of Trustees, upon the recommendation of the President of the University, may relieve a student from repayment of a loan provided under this section for undue hardship. The provision requires the University to report to the Joint Labor, Health and Social Services Interim Committee the number of students who have been relieved of the obligation to repay the loan.

W.S. 21-17-116 (f) – Under this provision, again similar to the WWAMI program, effective July 1, 2008, all loan repayments are to be credited to an account to be used by the University to fund loans under this program. This provision requires the University to report to the Committee regarding expenditures from this account during the preceding fiscal year.

Program Update

In 2010, the University's Board of Trustees approved the Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) program, to replace the master's degree nurse practitioner program. The move to the DNP is part of a larger national movement in nursing shifting advanced practice registered nursing (APRN) education to the doctoral level. In fall 2005, the American Association of Colleges of Nursing voted to change the level of preparation necessary for advanced practice nursing, including education for nurse practitioners, from the current master's degree to the doctorate level (DNP) by the year 2015. The move to the DNP was in response to several key national studies highlighting problems with the quality of health care in the US, the increasing scope of advanced practice nursing, the explosion of information and biomedical technology, pressures to improve quality of care while reducing costs, an aging and increasingly diverse population, and worsening disparities in care with larger barriers to access.

The DNP program allows the UW School of Nursing to continue the successful pipeline of primary care and mental health providers into practice in Wyoming, with students being able to choose to complete the DNP requirements for national certification as either a family nurse practitioner (FNP) or a psychiatric mental health nurse practitioner. The first DNP students started this fall (2012), with 15 students choosing to complete the requirements for the FNP option. Unfortunately, the one applicant who wanted to complete the PMHNP option did not accept the offer of admission. Consequently, the school has no DNP students completing the PMHNP option this first year.

In addition, the one PMHNP faculty member in the School of Nursing left UW for a new position in Pennsylvania. Due to proposed budget cuts for the University of Wyoming, the status of the position and the loan repayment program will not be known until the spring or summer of 2013. Given the lack of a faculty position, the School will not be accepting applications into the DNP program for 2013-2014 for students interested in the PMHNP option. Any surplus funds in the program at the end of the current biennium will revert to the state.

Despite these challenges, the School of Nursing is committed to providing education for students interested in the PMHNP option. The School of Nursing continues to work on collaboration with the University of Colorado's College of Nursing. CU has just hired a new Dean for the College of Nursing, and a collaboration meeting has already been scheduled for this fall. UW is exploring a number of options that would allow Wyoming students to obtain the necessary education to be nationally certified as a PMHNP, such as having these students take the PMHNP specialty courses at CU while completing the rest of the DNP requirements at UW.

Loan Repayment Update

The PMHNP loan repayment program supported six (6) students in their second year of education with FY2012 funding. All have graduated.

A total of 30 students have been supported by the PMHNP loan payment program since it was established. The table below summarizes the status of those participants who currently owe on their loan as of July 1, 2012. Six participants are in the grace period of their loan (Grace); eight are currently in the process of repaying the loan through professional practice as a PMHNP in Wyoming (Deferred for Practice) and seven participants are repaying the loan (Repayment). Of those not listed on the table, the UW Board of Trustees canceled one loan due to hardship for a former student and the remaining eight participants have paid their loan either in professional practice or through monetary payment.
